

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A temperature compensation circuit comprises a signal source to output a first signal corresponding to a temperature change of an ambient temperature to a 5 predetermined temperature, and a multiplier to multiply an external gain control signal and the first signal and output a second signal proportional to the temperature change and the first signal to a variable gain amplifier to perform the temperature compensation 10 with respect to the variable gain amplifier.